- B. Substantial remains of an octagonal Roman bath house, probably reused as a Christian baptistery, have been uncovered during a student training excavation near Faversham in Kent. - G. Shopping centers are full of all kinds of stores. They are like small, self-contained towns where you can find everything you want. Daniel Defoe

Daniel Defoe is the originator of the realistic novel. He was also a brilliant journalist and in many ways the father of modern English periodicals. He founded and paved the way for many magazines (The Revue, The Spectator).

Daniel Defoe was born in London: his father, a butcher, was wealthy enough to give his son a good education. Daniel was going to become a priest, but he wanted to become wealthy. His wish was never fulfilled: Daniel went bankrupt several times and was always deep in debt. The only branch of business in which he proved successful was journalism and literature. When Daniel was about 23 he started writing pamphlets on the question of the hour. He started writing pamphlets praising King William III who was supported by the Whig Party. No matter whose defense his brilliant pamphlets were written in, their irony was so subtle that the opponent didn't understand it at first. But as soon as his enemies realized the real character of the pamphlets, Daniel was sentenced to 7 years of imprisonment. It was a cruel punishment and when they came to set him free, people carried him on their shoulders. This was the climax of his political career and also the end of it. In 1719 he tried his hand at another kind of literature, fiction, and wrote Robinson Crusoe, the novel he is now best known for. After the book was published Daniel became famous and rich and was able to pay his creditors in full. Other novels that Daniel wrote were also very much talked about during his lifetime, but we don't hear much about them now. These novels include Captain Singelton (1720) and Moll Flanders (1722).
